

NGHỀ

Vietnamese mascot

by SHIM

RESEACH

The Nghê is a traditional Vietnamese mythical creature, distinct from other Asian symbols like the lion or qilin. It combines the characteristics of a dog—symbolizing loyalty—and a lion—representing strength and power. The Nghê is often placed in front of temples, shrines, or tombs to protect sacred places and ward off evil spirits. While fierce in appearance, the Nghê embodies a sense of guardianship and peace, making it a beloved and important part of Vietnamese cultural heritage. Its presence in art and architecture highlights its deep connection to Vietnamese identity and spirituality.
