

In the Wake of Butterflies

Design Concept

This work is inspired by Taiwan's native purple crow butterfly, transforming its unique life characteristics—"migration" and "aggregation"—into a transformable leather design. Centered on a modular, shape-shifting structure, the design allows a single item to be converted between a hat and a bag. This extends the product's lifecycle and reduces the need for producing multiple items, embodying the sustainable design principle of "one object, multiple uses."
